U.S. Foreign Policy Toward the Third World: A Post-cold War Assessment

By Jürgen Ruland, Theodor Hanf, Eva Manske

The contributors to this work examine the evolution of U.S. foreign policy toward the Third World, and the new policy challenges facing developing nations in the post-Cold War era. The book incorporates the key assessment standards of U.S. foreign policies directed toward critical regions, including Latin America, Africa, the Middle East, Central Asia, and Southeast Asia. Through this region-by-region analysis, readers will get the information and insight needed to fully understand U.S. policy objectives - especially with regard to economic and security issues in the wake of 9/11 - vis a vis the developing world. The book outlines both successes and failures of Washington, as it seeks to deal with the Third World in a new era of terrorism, trade, and democratic enlargement. It also considers whether anti-Western sentiment in Third World regions is a direct result of U.S. foreign policies since the end of the Cold War.

Editorial Review

Review

"This is an edited volume that stays on theme, provides solid historical analysis, interesting and provocative insider commentary, and presents the dilemmas and challenges of United States foreign policy in a fair and balanced manner. This is a fine text--in fact, I would use the word 'outstanding'--that I would definitely incorporate into my course on politics and development in the Third World."
