Project Otiyot: Healing Through Hebrew Letters By Miriam Leah Ben-Yaacov

The world was created through the vibration of the spoken word. Scientists have discovered that everything is vibration at its essence. In the field of vibrational medicine illnesses are diagnosed and cured through vibration. As Mankind struggles with the pervasive ills in the world, it be possible to look back to the very beginning, the Creation itself, for answers. The Sages of Israel have taught that before there is an illness, the cure has already been created. Could these cures be hinted in the words of the Torah and the Prophets--possibly in the very phrases that describe the problems themselves?

Editorial Review

About the Author

Miriam Leah Ben-Yaacov has been writing and teaching Torah for a number of years. In 1990, Miriam Leah and her family moved to Israel. During the thirteen years there, they lived in various communities in Judea. She studied Torah in the Jerusalem area and Safed with various teachers. Miriam traveled in Asia and the US on what she calls her spiritual journey. Meeting people of other cultures, she came to a new view of the Noahide Covenant (based on the Seven Universal Laws of the Torah that apply to the non-Jewish nations), and the idea of the Redemption took on a new dimension. After returning to the United States in 2003, she worked with a number of Bnai Noah organizations and schools, including Vendyl Jones Research Institutes, Noahide Nations, and Virtual Yeshiva. Miriam Leah's Torah classes focus on prayer and repentance necessary for complete healing—transformation of the soul. While living in Israel, Miriam Leah became a practitioner of an energy healing method called Shefa. She is currently participating in research on scientific application of Torah theories and methods to bring about healing on the individual and cosmic levels.
